

Abstract

Abstract: Service braking of a vehicle can be carried out by means of a service brake actuator having an electric motor as its service brake applying means. Energy from a loaded spring in a spring brake actuator connected to the service brake actuator can be released at will for supplying supplementary service brake energy to the service brake actuator.